

Editorial Note

Since its foundation in 1977, “Chang Gung Medical Journal” has aimed to promote biomedical research by providing a platform for sharing cutting edge scientific, clinical and technological advances amongst diverse biomedical professionals.

To reflect the rapid progress underway in both biomedical sciences and publication technology, “Chang Gung Medical Journal” will enhance the environment for future academic communication by attracting more high quality articles and expanding its distribution to a multidisciplinary readership.

Accordingly, as of December 2012 (Volume 35, Number 6), “Chang Gung Medical Journal” will be renamed “Biomedical Journal” with the cooperation of “Wolters Kluwer Health / Medknow”. As an open access periodical, our authors and readership alike will benefit from improved rapidity, economy and ease of access for publications, encouraging outstanding researchers to disseminate and exchange their ideas and innovations. We sincerely hope that you will continue to support the “Biomedical Journal” and look forward to your future contributions.

Fu-Chan Wei, Editor-in-chief

Jan-Kan Chen, Editor-in-chief